

I am puzzled by the recent efforts by the NAB to restrict the types of information that are available on XM Radio. The event of XM radio has been a boon to people like me, who felt that the choices available were limited to very few and inferior local stations. Although I have not stopped accessing my local stations for traffic and weather information, I am delighted that this sort of relevant service can be provided by XM, which is supported neither primarily by advertising nor government dollars, but by subscription. Please resist the forces that attempt to limit the services provided by this new medium and reject this crass limitation on XM radio's content.
